Hooker was trying to drive Jackson at Antietam. It is one of the myster- and removing paint. Apply it to the coatles of war that he did not annihilate him and thou take Lee to fignic. We outnumbered him, and we extended our lines until only a skirmish line of feel indeed. And yet all over the world there are men still older clinging fondly to their rheumatism and goat, when wide-battle in the whole war did the Con-federates fight so fiercely. It seemed to Oil certainly kills pain. It is sold the contract of the contr as if every single company had been told to hold its ground un'il the last man was wiped out. We breasted up an investigation of whether the long, to the gray lines time after time, but sweeping skirts of women lend to spread they would not give back. They faced us and died. If they lost a rod of ground they charged back and recovered two.

I remember how the corn waved came detached and floated into our day. faces like spider-webs on a dewy summer's morning. They were waiting for us-the men who had come up from Harper's Ferry without a haltfoot sore, hungry, thirsty, but ready to die to save Lee's left wing. They made never a halt to moisten their parched throats at the wells of Sharpsburg-never a halt for the laggards to come up. Lee was in danger, and old Stonewall rode at their head. The politicians simply slur them. Those who breasted up against them on the battlefield remember only how gallantly they died.

At first a scattering fire-a man falling out here and there. The pop! pop! pop! increases in rapidity-new it becomes a continual roar-here comes the command to charge. There is a cheer-a rush and we are chegged, Men cannot dodge bullets, but we dodge as they zip and spit and whistis The Only One Ever Printed-Can You by our ears. Men struck that way lose consciousness for a min-I find that I have lots of company. The dead and wounded are as numerous as the corn-hills.

A bullet in the shoulder is nothing. A pint or two of blood lost from the body is of no account. I turn over, seize a dead man by the arm and pull myself up, but everything dances before my eyes, and I sink down in a heap. There is no such a thing as time on a battlefield. A general may watch its flight, but a private soldier has no thought of it. The sun may have been at meridian when the battle opened. All of a sudden he is amszed that the orb has gone from sight. He has fought on, giving no heed to time.

Only half conscious-only half realizing that I was hit-I by and by felt the cool breezes of evening and lost the glare of the sun. Some one gave me water, but I felt too dreamy to open my eyes. Some one pulled a dead man over my legs-a wounded comrade who had crept over to me in search of water and died. But I did not open my eyes; I could not it seemed as if great weights had been placed on my eyelids to keep them shut. There was a babel of sounds around me, but I heard only one voice. That sounded miles away as it said:

"Now, then, you all be mighty keerful how you tote that boy, for he's bin powfully hit. Needn't mind me so much, though I reckon I'm good for a wooden leg if you Yanks kin spar' the timber.

It was a "rebel." He had been caring for me for hours as tenderly as he would for his own son, and yet they separated us that night never to meet again. I have never had opportunity to look into his face and thank him. I never even saw him. -N. Y. World.

The See of Gaillee.

The lake of Genesareth, called also the Sea of Galilee, etc., situated in Palestine, sixty-five miles north of the Dead Sea, is pear-shaped. The greatest width is six and three-quarters miles; its extreme length is fifteen miles. The Jordan enters it muddy at the north, and passes out clear at the south. The natural features of the lake are neither various nor especially attractive. The chief interest connected with it is that Christ passed much of his time on its shores. It abounds in the best kinds of fish standing, Inward Tumors, and which made the southern part of it particularly noted as a fishing ground. The towns around it in former times are now mostly in ruins.
